

Praising God Through Difficult Days

Adversity. Sometimes we call it trials, or tribulation. Maybe hard times. By whatever name it's called it's still something we all experience during our lifetime on this earth. As we travel the roads of life, all of us are confronted with streets that seem to be dead ends. When we do, we may become discouraged. After all, we live in a society where expectations can be high and demands even higher.

If you find yourself enduring difficult circumstances, remember that God remains in His heaven. If you become discouraged with the direction of your day or your life, turn your thoughts and prayers to Him. He is a God of possibility, not negativity. He will guide you through your difficulties and beyond them. "If He has brought you to it, He will bring you through it." And then, with a renewed spirit of optimism and hope, you can thank the Giver of all things good for gifts that are simply too profound to fully understand and for treasures that are too numerous to count.

When we face an impossible situation, all self-reliance and self-confidence must melt away; we must totally depend on Him for the resources. God's faithfulness and grace make the impossible possible. Faith sees the invisible, believes the unbelievable, and receives the impossible.

Stay eager for Heaven!
